

Sleeping bag Cleaning

If the sleeping bag or cover is just slightly soiled simply brush off as much as possible then sponge down the outer with clean water and leave to dry.

It is not recommended that your sleeping bag is stored in the bedchair. If it is damp mildew will form and continually compressing the fibres can cause the performance to be reduced irreversibly. Ideally they should be stored loose in a cotton or mesh bag.

Always air your bag thoroughly before storing and each day during a trip if possible.

Synthetic bags can be machine washed, though due to the size we recommend using a larger commercial machine for this purpose.

Use a specialist cleaning product such as Grangers 30 degree cleaner.

If using a smaller washing machine you may have to repeat the rinse cycle to ensure that all the cleaning agent has been rinsed from your sleeping bag.

If weather permits you can just hang your bag out to dry alternatively in a warm, well aired space.

A good solution is to use a liner to reduce the number of times your bag will need to be cleaned; this will increase the life of the bag.

Always follow any instructions given on the bag.

Always rinse the bag thoroughly, as any cleaning products left behind will affect the loft of the bag when it has dried.

If you are reluctant to clean your bag at home or fear damaging your bag we recommend that you have it cleaned professionally by the following companies:
